University Theatre Presents “Another Antigone”

Contributed by Terri Janney

“Another Antigone” by A.R. Gurney is a witty, provocative, and absorbing examination of some of the more vexing problems besetting present-day American Universities that are now more preoccupied with fund raising, job placement, and political correctness than with the importance of a classical education. It is student versus professor in a showdown of who has the most clout on campus. A precocious student wants to rewrite the Greek masterpiece Anitgone to reflect current sociopolitical concerns as a final paper. The professor is adamant in his refusal to accept the play in place of the formal paper. As the student marshals forces within the University, the professor finds himself playing Creon to the student’s Antigone. It is the classic struggle between the unyielding civil authority and a rebellious individual. NC State students Kate Isley and Frank Sarnie III play the students and guest artists Rick Lonon and Cathy Rodgers play the Professor and Dean.

This production will be presented at Thompson Theatre on March 25,26,27,31, April, 2,3, at 8 p.m. and March 28, and April 4 at 3:00 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at Ticket Central, 515-1100 in advance or bought at the door if available. NC State student tickets are $6 and NC State faculty/staff tickets are $12.

Intern Sites for Spring 2004 Semester

COM 496, better known as the “internship class”, allows students to gain work experience in the communication field. Usually taken the last semester of a student’s senior year, requires the student to work approximately 10 hours a week at their internship site. Internship locations for this semester are as follows:

Faculty News

- Dr. Robert Entman recently gave a talk at London University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He also served as a member of the Annenberg Commission on Democracy and the Press, which met in early February, in Palm Springs, California.
- Dr. Vicki Gallagher will be presenting a paper titled, "Museums and the Recreation of History: Nostalgia, Interactivity and Public Memory," at a conference honoring the scholarship of G. Thomas Goodnight, on April 16-18, 2004, at Northwestern University, located in Evanston, IL. Additionally, Dr. Gallagher and Dr. Zagacki have co-authored an essay titled, "Visibility and Rhetoric: The Rhetorical Function of Visual Images in Civil Rights Activism and Commemoration," which will be presented at the biannual Rhetoric Society of America conference in Austin, Texas, May 2004.
- Sandra Stallings has been invited to attend the NC Campus Compact Service Learning Institute on Wednesday, March 4, at Elon College. This one day conference will focus on the integration of SL in a variety of different courses and settings.
- Dr. Steve Wiley's article titled, "Rethinking Nationality in the Context of Globalization," appears in the current issue of Communication Theory, Vol. 14, No. 1, February 2004. The article analyzes the ways in which the concept of nation has shaped theories of communication and culture and proposes an alternative approach to thinking about nationality and globalization. Dr. Wiley was also recently named to the Board of Directors of the Latin American Research Center (LARC). This is a non-profit organization base out of Raleigh which promotes cross-cultural and cross-class communication in communities and schools experiencing high levels of immigration from Latin America and other world regions. Currently, Dr. Wiley is conducting an action research project in conjunction with LARC's community-based after school and summer programs. The project examines the cognitive and affective maps that shape teachers', students', and parents' understandings of place, identity, and belonging in the context of immigration. It will also test the effectiveness of the organization's efforts to transform those maps by building social and technological networks that connect both school and community.

NOTE TO FACULTY AND STUDENTS: There are several research, internship, and volunteer opportunities for students interested in this project. Computer skills and Spanish are highly desirable but not absolutely necessary. Please contact Steve Wiley at steve\_wiley@ncsu.edu if you are interested.
